Overview -----

LIFT Social Enterprise is taking a business approach to supporting the most excluded and disadvantaged young unemployed Maori into employment and self-employment in Aotearoa/New Zealand. Using innovative approaches to connect with and engage young people, LIFT leverages commercial business relationships to unlock sustainable employment opportunities.

And with the fast-changing labour market and uncertainty of future job prospects, enterprise development and self-employment opportunities are also a core service delivery focus for young people through LIFT.

Come along and hear about the practical approaches LIFT takes to service design and delivery in order to achieve the best possible outcomes for young Indigenous job seekers in Aotearoa/New Zealand. Leave the workshop with key insights on how to apply these ideas into services that your own workplace or organisation designs and delivers.

About the Speaker -----

Jody Hamilton is the Lead Facilitator for LIFT Social Enterprise and Director of JMP Consulting, with 20 years working in the areas of employment and economic development, including 12 years as a senior executive in organisations in Australia, Canada and New Zealand.

Jody and the whole LIFT team draw on experiences in strategy, management and operations in economic and social development, where they have primarily worked in the areas of youth, Maori and Indigenous employment.

In her spare time, Jody wrangles her five-year-old son Paimako and tries to guide her 21-year-old daughter Moana as she navigates her way into the world of work.

Hosted by Ingersoll Consulting -----
